OUR CONGRESSIONAL DELEGATES.

Our citizens are having a surfeit of political talk, but they stand the infliction without loss of health. All three political parties have had a hearing, and the arguments they present have been accorded a fair hearing. One important point involved in the election next month in the representation of this state in congress. Our delegation is now republican, which is fairly expository of the politics of the state, but how the present mixing up of parties may effect the result at the polls, confuses the judgment of the most wary. Representative Hermann escapes all censure from political foes, and is strongly sustained by his own party. He is indefatigable in the discharge of his duties, his services always being at the command of his constituents, and while he is not ambitious to make showy speeches, he is always on hand when his presence is useful, and his votes are generally on the right side.

Senator Williams, in urging Mr. Hermann's re-election dwelt on the value of legislative experience in a member of congress. A new man in that body has so much to learn, he is strange to everybody and everybody is strange to him, he is naturally timid in thrusting himself forward and is always afraid of making mistakes; that for the greater part of his first term he is of but little use to his constituents, and it has to be proved whether he possesses fitness for the trust he has undertaken. This is not to be used as an argument against sending new men to congress, but at this time it has special weight.

Our senators are objected to by some of the speakers as attorneys for railroad corporations, and thus not untrammeled in their advocacy of the general interest; but it must be remembered they are republicans, possessed of more than average talent, and faithful advocates of Oregon when any measure affecting its welfare is under consideration. The United States senate now stands 30 republicans to 37 democrats; the change of politics in one senator would give the majority to the other party. This is holding on by a distressingly narrow margin. The administration in democratic hands, the lower house of congress democratic, and the senate held to the other side by our majority. Mr. Dolph's term expires with the present congress, March 4th next, and the political complexion of his successor will be determined by our next legislature. It is evident this is no time for foolishness. The people of Oregon cannot afford to make any haphazard experiments. Republican ascendancy after the date named depends upon the wisdom and earnestness of the party. But it is a time when everyone counts one. Republicans of all shades of belief—high tariff and low tariff, pro-liquor and anti-liquor—are required to bury all minor differences and vote the legislative ticket straight, because trifling with that body may lead to momentous consequences. Many may be dissatisfied, and some look for a change of principle; but let them hold on for awhile. We are about to cross a dangerous stream, and all swapping of horses must be deferred till we arrive on the other shore.

GOVERNOR HILL'S VETO.

Governor Hill has a second time vetoed the Crosby high license bill. In reporting this discouraging piece of news the prompting is to get angry at the New York executive, and charge him with being in league with the members of the accused run traffic. But, if we are to take the arguments of the prohibitionists at their face value, this democratic official has done a wise and conservative act. Under high license and other similar restrictions, the liquor business thrives, the number of arrests increases and the consumption of liquor enlarged. It fills good easy souls, too, into a dream of false security. They wish the world improved without noisy ado, and suppose that high licenses imposed on saloon keepers is a half way step to prohibition. This being the fact, it is a little strange the terrible alarm that seized the liquor dealers in New York when the bill passed the state assembly. Thousands of industrious citizens, it was declared, would be deprived of their livelihood, and the poor man be debarred of his necessary potion. If high license is in the interest of the liquor trade, why the frantic appeals for help that have been put forth in the whisky organs of the empire state the last few weeks?

The prohibitionists may now congratulate themselves over the half loaf being snatched from the moral reformers in New York, and then tell us how much nearer they are, by the reactionary and obstructive veto of Gov. Hill, to the amendment to the national constitution they are seeking of congress.
